PENNSYLVANIA BAKERS TO MEET

The 16th annual convention of the Pennsylvania Bakers' Association will be held at Bedford Springs Hotel, June 9 to 11, and all indications point to one of the largest turnouts of bakers and their friends that have ever attended a Pennsylvania bakersmeeting.

The educational part of the program will be held in the mornings of the three days and in the afternoons there will be the sports events. Monday and Tuesday afternoon will be devoted to golf and tennis and Wednesday afternoon will be the baseball game between the bakers and supriymen.

Some of the leading men in the baking industry in the country will be present as well as a delegation from New York who will come in four special Pullman cars. C. W. Allen of the Bedford Sanitary Bakery is chairman of the prize committee.

C. C. Latus, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the Association accompanied by A. E. Poad, the Fleischmann Co. representative of Johnstown, was in Bedford the past week and conferred with the several hotels here relative to the entertainment of the bakers and their friends. While here Mr. Poad presented to Mr. Allen a diploma certifying that he had attended the course of instruction in the Fleischmann Traveling School for Bakers at Pittsburgh. This school is for the purpose of showing the bakers how to make the finer lines of cakes and pasteries. Samuel Goetz of Chicago is the dean of the school. He expects to be in Bedford during the convention.

J. Anson Wright will deliver the address of welcome and the opening prayer will be made by Rev. W. H. B. Carney, pastor of the Lutheran church.

"A STEP FARTHER FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS"

The Convention at Hyndman on June 3rd and 4th to Be Full of Enthusiasm

"Without organization we have nothing but scattered effort, with a certain definite loss". That is the opinion of all workers in the Sunday School cause. It is also the reason for the existence of the national, state, and county Sunday School conventions. The state organization is only an enlargement of the county conventions.

"A live county organization" is the slogan of the publicity committee, composed of H. C. Heckerman, W. S. Lysinger, and W. R. Speer. These gentlemen are backing an ideal program for the Hyndman convention on June 3 and 4. They say: "Let us come together to discover our common ideas, no matter how few they may be, and to give and receive constructive suggestions, and upon these to build bigger and better Sunday Schools."

All superintendents, teachers, and friends who are guided by love for their leader, and who are willing to consecrate two days of their time, and a real measure of their thought and energy to the present definite service for the Master, are urged to cheer by their presence those who have assembled such a helpful program for the Hyndman Convention, on June 3 and 4.

"On to Hyndman!"

Memorial services will be held at Trinity Reformed Church, Friend's Cove on Friday, May 30, beginning at 1.30 P. M. A program has been arranged for. Reverend Royer of Bedford and R. R. Jones of The Cove will give the addresses. Veterans of all wars are strongly invited to turn out.

Mrs. G. H. Duff, who has been a patient in the Western Maryland Hospital at Cumberland, Md., for the past several weeks, returned on Sunday to her home here and is somewhat improved.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Miller and sons, Thomas, Lamont, Howard and Robert, of Windber, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Berkhimer. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are former Bedford residents, having been born and raised in our town.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Russell motored to Philadelphia, on Tuesday. They were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Ralph Heacock and little son David, who had been spending some time at the Russell home.

WELL KNOWN CITIZEN PASSES AWAY

Edwin Hartley, well known and highly esteemed resident of Snake Spring Township died Friday, May 23, 1924 at 11:15 P. M., at his home there, aged 82 years, 8 months and 9 days. Death was due to complication of diseases incident to old age. He was a son of John G. and Lucy Ann (McGee) Hartley and was born September 14, 1841 in Snake Spring Township, of which place he was a life-long resident. In June 1860, he was united in marriage with Margaret Koontz who died at their home in the Valley in February 1897.

Deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Miriam Sansom, one son, O. C. Hartley and a grandson, Edwin Alexander Hartley, all of Wilkesburg. He is also survived by one brother, John G. Hartley, of Philadelphia; and three sisters: Mrs. Emma McAtee, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Sara Miller of Williamsport, and Mrs. C. E. Howard, of Orlando, Fla.

Funeral services were held at the late residence on Monday afternoon, May 26, conducted by Rev. J. V. Royer of this place, assisted by Rev. Mizell of Everett. Interment was made in the Bedford cemetery.

Friends from a distance who attended the funeral were: Rev. Dr. Sheridan W. Bell and Mr. George G. Feiger, both of Wilkesburg.

NEW ISSUE OF STAMPS PLACED ON SALE

On Wednesday of this week the Bedford Post Office placed on sale the new issue of Huguenot-Walloon Tercentenary Stamps, in one and two cent denominations.

The department has issued this special series of postage stamps in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the settling in New Netherland, now the State of New York, of the Walloons in 1624. These stamps are issued in three denominations, one, two, and five cent, and are described as follows: They are rectangular in shape, about 1 3/8 by 7/8 inches in size. The one cent stamp, printed in green, has for its central design a view of the ship New Netherland, upon which the Walloons sailed. The two-cent stamp printed in red, represents the landing of the Walloons at Albany, N. Y., and the five-cent stamp, printed in blue, represents a marker located at Mayport, Florida, showing the landing place of one colony of Walloons.

The surrounding design of the three denominations is identical, except for the necessary change of numerals representing the denominations. Above the central design in a semicircular panel appear the words "Huguenot-Walloon Tercentenary" in white Roman letters, and above this, at the top of the stamp in a straight line, are the words "U. S. Postage". In both upper corners are ribbon scrolls bearing the years "1624" at the left and "1924" at the right. At the bottom of the stamp in a straight line, is the word "Cent" or "Cents", and in both lower corners within circles with dark backgrounds appears the white numeral representing the denomination. The entire stamp is inclosed within a single white-line border.

HERE'S PLEASURE FOR ALL

It will be well worth almost any sacrifice of personal comfort to hear every speaker at the Sunday School Convention at Hyndman next Tuesday and Wednesday. Among those who will take leading parts are Rev. Royer, Mr. Cridland, Mr. Patterson, Rev. Clapper, Rev. Jay, Mr. Espen-schade and Rev. Bonsall, Jr., besides McSparran and Kelly. A program full of uplift and instruction is promised by the publicity committee.

The music will be in charge of Mr. Yoder. "He's great", say those who have heard him. "You can't help singing with him."

LOCAL GIRL GRADUATES

Miss Martha Mervine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mervine, of West Pitt Street, is now a graduate trained nurse, having graduated on Wednesday, May 23, from the Western Maryland Hospital, at Cumberland, Md. In the near future she will return to Bedford where she will enter into practice.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Russell motored to Philadelphia, on Tuesday. They were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Ralph Heacock and little son David, who had been spending some time at the Russell home.

HON. JOHN McSPARRAN TO SPEAK AT HYNDMAN

"The Man of the Hour", by Hon. John A. McSparran, Master of the State Grange, is the title of an address that will repay anyone's effort to be present at the Sunday School meeting at Hyndman next Tuesday evening. Mr. McSparran is a speaker who holds the close attention of his hearers by the force of his arguments and by the fascination of his oratory.

Hon. Clyde Kelly's "Challenge to America" is an address that once heard will long be remembered. Mr. Kelly is one of the leading members of Pennsylvania delegation in Congress. He is eloquent, aggressive, and convincing. He is a church worker and an outstanding Christian. He is not afraid to mix politics and religion. His "Challenge to America" at the Hyndman Sunday School Convention next Wednesday evening will close the meeting with an emphasis that will insure "a step farther."

"Don't fail to hear McSparran and Kelly is one of the leading mem-committee."

W. C. T. U.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. J. F. Russell on Thursday evening Mrs. A. C. Blackburn presided.

Following the business session plans were discussed for holding the annual Dues Social. The month of June was decided upon—probably the third week, the exact date to be named later. The social will be held at the home of Mrs. A. C. Blackburn.

The annual dues are now One Dollar which also entitles the member to the State Paper—"Pennsylvania Bulletin".

Announcement was made of the Inter-County Institute to be held in Huntingdon, July 15-16, which promises to be a "Red Letter" event in W. C. T. U. effort. This institute known as the "Mountain Group" includes Blair, Center, Huntingdon, Fulton and Bedford Counties.

The Bedford County W. C. T. U. Convention date was changed from June to September. Everett Union being Hostess. From a recent visit in the Broad Top Region the County president reported an increased temperance activity along educational lines by organizations of the young people into L. T. L. Effort.

Formation rather than reformation in character is the aim of the W. C. T. U.

Miss Catharine Eicholtz

EICHOLTZ, Departed this life Thursday, May 29, 1924, at 10.55 A. M., 121 East Penn St., Catharine Elizabeth Eicholtz.

Miss Eicholtz was a daughter of Hon. William G. and Eliza Eicholtz. She was born in Adams County, Pa., January 25, 1848.

Early in life the deceased united with the Lutheran church and in every instance down through the years she had been faithful to those vows taken at the altar in the church of her choice. She lived a good life and did much for the up-building of Christ's Kingdom here. She was a kind neighbor, a loving and devoted Christian woman.

Surviving to mourn her death are the following brothers and sisters: George C. Eicholtz, John E. Eicholtz, Clinton Eicholtz, Mrs. H. A. Cook, of Bedford, and Mrs. Sue Moorehead, of Canton, Ohio.

The funeral services will be conducted from her home on East Penn Street, by her pastor, Rev. Dr. Carney, Sunday afternoon at 2 P. M. Interment in Bedford cemetery.

The deceased was a cripple for years. During all those long years she maintained a most courageous spirit and cheerful disposition seeing the bright side and living always in the sunshine. She was possessed of boundless Christian character and was doing for others at all time.

All that science, loving hearts and hands could find was done by her sisters and brothers to conserve her strength and prolong her days.

Her determination to serve her master made her life busy and her words during her short sickness were characteristic of her relation to the good life she had lived.

Dearest sister, how we miss you. How we miss your smiling face! But our Heavenly Father called you. And death has left an empty place. But your sufferings are all over. And your sorrows are no more. And if faithful we will meet you Over on that shining shore

The blow was hard, the shock severe. To part with one we loved so dear. We loved her dearly, but God loved her best. But you left us to remember none on earth can take your place

CHRISTY BROS. CLOWNS COMING TO-MORROW

Clowns are one of the reasons for the unusual success this season of the Christy Brothers Trained Wild Animals Shows. There are nearly fifty of them picked from the talent of the world, each with original methods of creating laughter. From the opening spectacle to the close of the entertainment the performance abounds with merry capers, the most amusing of stunts and grotesque pantomimes.

Many great clown acts have originated with this exhibition. This season's performance has more than its usual number of novelties or the laugh provoking kind. The great performance is punctuated with hilariously amusing antics and one laugh follows the other throughout the entire entertainment. Individual acts are made by clowns from all the foreign countries and many from the United States. Groups of jesters and fools fill the arena, burlesquing public events, taking off national characters and enacting little pantomimes and travesties to keep the audience in constant merriment.

One of the features that has always made Christy Bros. show famous has been its clowns. Never have they resorted to the timeworn devices to earn a laugh. They are this season, as they always have been, the originators of their profession. The audience is kept in constant good humor, the children are delighted and their lads relish the two hours or more of clever nonsense.

Those who live to laugh will find the performance rich in amusement. The ancient tricks and old time devices still in vogue with inferior shows have been discarded by these up-to-date clowns and the result is refreshing.

Christy Bros. Famous Clown Alley will be seen with the show, which exhibits at Bedford on Saturday, May 31.

OUTSTANDING FEATURES OF CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM

The Welsh Male Quartet, which has sung for King George of England and for the President of the United States, will open the 1924 chautauqua, according to announcement of John M. Grierson Redpath advance man who was in Bedford Monday.

Other musical attractions on the five-day program include the Farnum Trio, Joseph Baldi, accordionist, the College Singing Girls and Herrick and Jensen, comedy musicians.

The play, "Give and Take," is to be offered by a cast of six New York performers. This is the comedy-drama in which Louis Mann and George Sidner starred in New York and Chicago. It is one of the greatest laugh-producers in a decade.

Hon. W. L. Harding, former governor of Iowa; Herbert Leon Cope, humorist, and Ben A. Arneson, with a discussion of "Purified Politics", are the season's lecturers. J. Franklin Caveny, cartoonist and clay modeler, is to offer a lecture-demonstration on "The Wit and Wisdom of Chalk and Clay."

Among the diversions to be offered during chautauqua week are Jean MacDonald, entertainer, and Brush and Company, magicians, with elaborate stage settings and featuring big illusions. Twice daily the children are to be entertained with stories and games under the direction of a trained supervisor.

Dates of the Bedford chautauqua have been announced as June 8, 10, 11, 12, 13.

MILLER-REIGHARD

Mr. William Miller of Mann's Choice, and Miss Romaine Reighard daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Reighard, of East Pitt Street, motored to Pittsburgh last Thursday and were quietly united in marriage.

Mr. Miller is an enterprising young man and is an undertaker at Mann's Choice.

Miss Reighard, highly esteemed young lady, prior to her marriage, had been employed as clerk at the Maurice Clothing Store.

For the present the happy couple will reside at the Reighard home.

PLAY FESTIVAL FOR THE CHILDREN

There will be a Play Festival for Children next Friday evening, June 6th at 6.30 o'clock, on the square back of the Court House. Prizes will be given to the winners of all the contests. All children of the grades are asked to come to the square not later than 6.30 next Friday evening.

No crowd at Hyndman can overtax the hospitality of that progressive town. The Convention hosts will be well taken care of next Tuesday and Wednesday.

BOYS AND GIRLS TO BECOME MAGICIANS

BRUSH, THE GREAT

An exceptionally happy stage manner assists Mr. Brush in his programs of magic, prestidigitation, boniment and necromancy at Chautauqua. His voice is soft and musical, yet clear and resonant, so that he is easily understood. He is graceful, and with his dexterity and ceaseless flow of fun, keeps his audience in a continual state of wonderment and amusement.

Many boys and girls are called to the platform to aid in the program of mystery.

Brush works fast. He does at least one-third more tricks in the same length of time than most other magicians. His is really three entertainments in one—comedy, mystery and—underlying all—something of the educational and moral.

This great magician has attractive stage settings and carries a large equipment which cost him many thousands of dollars to compile. He brings with him a half-ton of baggage, and has two assistants.

With occidental, oriental and original magic, Brush is a manipulator par-excellent. He startles, mystifies and enchants. He is uncanny.

REMEMBER

When in need of plants, cabbage, cauliflower, tomatoes, peppers, 10 cents a dozen.

The GULF STREAM

Map of Gulf Stream and Other Atlantic Currents.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

It is a seeming paradox that the world's greatest, and in many ways most important, "river" has no banks. But the paradox disappears when the Gulf stream is introduced as this mightiest of terrestrial "rivers." Though it has no banks throughout most of its course, its margins are fairly well defined for many hundreds of miles; and even where it skirts the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, nearly 2,000 miles from what is generally thought of as its "source," its edges can be distinguished almost sharply when crossed by a change in the color of the waters.

That the Gulf stream deserves to rank as perhaps the greatest of streams can be seen from the staggering volume of water which it carries at a fairly rapid rate. In fact, some who have studied it and other ocean currents closely have called it "probably the grandest and most mighty of terrestrial phenomena." A calculation of the average volume of water passing through the 40-mile-wide Straits of Florida—where the Gulf stream comes nearest to having "banks"—gives the enormous sum of 90,000,000,000 tons each hour. If this one single hour's flow of water could be evaporated, the remaining salts would make several cargoes for all the ships of the world.

Even this tells but part of the story, for the Gulf stream does not come solely from the Gulf of Mexico. One branch flows northward outside the West Indies and joins the Gulf of Mexico branch north of the Bahamas. The main Gulf stream, then, as it flows along the coast of the Southern states above Florida, probably moves as much as 180,000,000,000 tons of water an hour—a flow that utterly dwarfs that of all the world's Amazons and Congos and Mississippi.

The Gulf stream has had a role in world affairs, the importance of which is seldom realized. For ages it has helped in the scattering and evolution of animal and vegetable forms. It has held the climate of much of northern Europe in its moving waters. But for its beneficent work as carrier of equatorial heat to the northward and eastward England might have the climate of Labrador, and Norway the bleakness of Greenland. It has even had much to do with the geological formation of large areas of the ocean's bottom by determining the places of sedimentation. And day by day it is a factor in the price of everything carried afloat between Europe and America, as well as in the safety of all who cross the Atlantic.

Helped to Shape History.

The great current has had its part, too, in shaping the history of America. Before the discovery of the New World, strange woods and fruits were found on the shores of Europe and the off-lying islands. Some of these were seen and examined by Columbus, and to his thoughtful mind they were convincing evidence that strange lands existed somewhere to the westward. These objects were carried by the Gulf stream and by the prevailing winds from the American continent, so that in part the stream laid the foundation for Columbus' famous voyage. Once under way, and sailing across the southern rather than the northern portion of the Atlantic, Columbus had the return flow of the great equatorial stream to help carry him to the West Indies.

Ponce de Leon, famous searcher for the Fountain of Youth, discovered the Gulf stream at the point where, constricted between Florida and the Bahamas, it flows most mightily. He tells in his journal how, in attempting to sail southward along the Florida coast, with a good wind behind, his ships steadily lost ground because of a mighty current flowing northward.

The division of the English colonies into New England and Virginia was probably in part due to the routes by which they were reached. Vessels bound from England to New England crossed the North Atlantic outside the limit of the Gulf stream, or in a feeble adverse current. They had the advantage, too, of crossing the Newfoundland banks and of being able surely to replenish their provisions by fishing.

This voyage, however, though advantageous to the New Englanders, situated in the North, was not considered practicable for vessels bound for the Southern colonies. They sailed south to the trade-wind region, through the Caribbean and around Cuba, thence following the Gulf stream to their port. The first search to become fairly familiar with the limits of the Gulf stream between Europe and America were the New England whalers, who found their quarry only outside the current's warm waters. Benjamin Franklin heard of their experiences, and also how the coasting vessels from Boston to Charleston, S. C., sometimes would take three or four weeks to make the southward voyage, but would often accomplish the return trip in a week. He found, too, that English packets with American mails were two or three weeks longer on the voyage to America than in the reverse direction.

Named by Franklin.

Franklin suggested the name, "Gulf stream," because it issues from the Gulf of Mexico. Although it is only a part of the grand scheme of Atlantic ocean circulation, and though the Gulf of Mexico is in reality only a sort of way station for this part, the name is generally applied to the current as it was given by Franklin.

In the large funnel-shaped opening between Cuba and the western extremity of the Florida reefs the current is somewhat erratic, but by the time Havana is reached it has become a regular and steady flow. As it rounds the curve of the Florida shore the straits contract and the current then practically fills the banks from shore to shore and reaches almost to the bottom, which at this point has a greatest depth of nearly 3,000 feet.

As it leaves the Straits of Florida its direction is about north, but it gradually changes and follows a course approximately parallel to the curve of 100 fathoms depth until it arrives off Cape Hatteras, and maintains about the same width as when it issued from the Straits of Florida. From this point it starts on its course to Europe. It has lost something in velocity, as well as temperature, and as it journeys to the eastward it gradually diminishes in both, until at last it becomes a gentle flow.

On this part of its course it passes not far from the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, where it is met almost at right angles by the great Labrador current, bringing down from the Arctic a stream of cold water, pack ice and icebergs. This floating ice, dumped into the Gulf stream, was the cause, not many years ago, of the appalling Titanic disaster.

When this cold current meets that of the Gulf stream, of much higher temperature, the former undercuts the latter. The shallow-draft pack ice, being no longer under the influence of the polar current, is carried to the eastward by the warm Gulf stream current and soon disappears, but the deep-draft bergs are still under the influence of the lower current running south, as well as of the surface current running east, and so they continue on until well into the Gulf stream, sometimes reaching the thirty-ninth parallel, which is nearly 200 miles south of the southernmost point of the Grand Banks.

This ice, together with the fog, which usually accompanies the meeting of currents of considerable differences in temperature, has compelled steamship companies to make a detour around the region of danger.

Congress early recognized the importance of learning everything possible about the Gulf stream and authorized the coast survey to make observations. In the Straits of Florida it was found that the greatest surface velocity was about four miles an hour and that this maximum was reached about eleven miles from the Florida shore. Even at 250 fathoms, or 1,500 feet, below the surface the great stream was found to be moving along at about a mile an hour. At this point the stream is about forty miles wide.

Explained by Scientists.

Numerous theories have been advanced to account for the Gulf stream and other ocean currents. But the many observations of the coast survey and the studies of the late Admiral John Elliott Pillsbury of the navy have about settled the matter in favor of wind and wave. The trade winds are the real parents of the Gulf stream. Though they vary somewhat in exact direction and in velocity, they blow steadily, on the average, in the same general direction in the west, year in and year out. Their friction induces a current in the water in the same direction. At first—if one can imagine the beginning of the Gulf stream's flow—only the merest surface skim was driven along with the wind. But gradually the motion was communicated from layer to layer until at last the movement extended to water hundreds of feet below the surface.

CONSERVE THE NATURAL
POWER OF PENNSYLVANIAHarrisburg, Pa., May 29, 1924.— Morris L. Cooke, Director of the Giant Power Survey, is of the opinion that power is of greater importance in the life of Pennsylvania than of any other State. The United States census for the year 1919 shows that 6,453,808 horse power were used in Pennsylvania. Ohio ranked next with 3,235,108 horse power. New York was a close third with 3,027,869 horse power, and Massachusetts came next with 1,742,376 horse power.
This means that Pennsylvania uses more than any other two states.Mr. Cooke feels that anything that can be done to develop cheaper power or to increase the total horse power available in the State will have a great money value to the people. With a horse power reckoned at the low price of $30.00 per year, a 10% average saving in its cost would mean a total annual saving of $20,000,000 to the industry of Pennsylvania. Making available a larger amount and cheaper power will be a big factor in enabling Pennsylvania to continue her prosperity and develop her many important industries.This amount of power will mean that each wage earner in Pennsylvania in the industry has as a helper in his production efforts almost 5 horse power, while in Ohio each wage earner has about 4 horse power, and in Massachusetts and New York only about 2 horse power are available to each worker."Every man, woman, and child in the cities and towns of Pennsylvania has one and one-sixth horse power assisting them in their work, while in Ohio each inhabitant has only about 3-4 of a horse power, and in New York and Massachusetts less than 1-2 of a horse power is available for each city dweller.Experience has shown that the people using the largest amount of power per capita are the most prosperous. Wealth is possible only when valuables are created by production, and production is dependent upon the application of power. The main object of the Giant Power Survey of Pennsylvania is to make more power available to a far larger number of the people of the State at a lower cost.

LILACS.

O here and there on poorer lands an old deserted homestead stands, in silent sadness to deplore the guests who come again no more. For many feet that used to go across its threshold to and fro on roads and trails have learned to know and those who built it long of old have mingled with the churchyard mold. The human brood has swarmed and gone, but lilacs in the yard bloom on, and ever, as the old house grieves are pressing upward toward its eaves the tender green hearts of their leaves. The mother's hands were rough with toil who set those lilacs in the soil.
Thanks be to God who gave the wife one touch of beauty in her life. The father worked from sun to sun for living was not lightly won. The fields where he was wont to grub are overgrown with brush and scrub.
His walls are down, their mighty stones are crushed to make a roadway's bones. Lost are his labors great and small, but mother's bush outlives them all. And ever with the warmth of May, what time we keep Memorial Day, the lilac wakes, to sudden bloom and waits a message to her tomb. Gone are the sons her pangs gave birth, her fire is dead upon the hearth. Sunk the flames and black the embers, but the lilac still remembers it blooms for her and spreads its scent, the incense of a sacrament. BOB ADAMSFRIEND'S COVE

WEEKLY HEALTH TALK

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by Dr. William C.
Miller, Director, Bureau of Public Health Education. Dr. Miller says:
"Madam House Fly is about to make her bow to Pennsylvania for the year 1924. Whether her numbers be great or small is dependent entirely upon the degree of hospitality by which she is received.Experience has shown that house flies make their annual appearance in Pennsylvania in numbers, during the month of May. June shows a much higher fly population which, many times multiplied in July reaches its final peak during the month of August. Flies then begin to decrease month by month until the last remaining stragglers succumb to the frosts of October.It has been observed, year after year, the number of infant deaths from intestinal diseases begins to mount during the month of May and it continuously increase, reaching its highest mark in August, at the time we have the greatest number of flies; then to gradually go down, as the fly incidence decreases.It cannot be said that all cases of intestinal disorder in infants, during the summer months, are due to flies, because there are many other important factors which bear directly upon baby sickness, such as improper feeding, bad milk weather, conditions, etc., but since it has been demonstrated that intestinal disorders in adults as well as in infants, may be borne by flies and since it has been noted that, in the localities where intensive fly campaigns, which resulted in a marked reduction of flies, there has been a corresponding decrease in the cases of infantile intestinal disorders, the fly must be regarded as the probable carrier in very many instances.Flies are no longer regarded as useful scavengers. They are known as unnecessary and dangerous pests.The proper way to get rid of flies is to destroy their breeding places. They breed in filth, accordingly, no filth—no flies. Flies as a rule, do not travel very far. Therefore, if some morning you notice a group of expectant flies gazing eagerly through your kitchen screen, you may assume they have not traveled from afar off. They are probably from your neighbor's premises but, before starting a family feud, look carefully around your own back yard.
If you would like to know how to organize a community fly campaign, write to the Pennsylvania Department of Health, Harrisburg, Penna."

IS SERIOUS SITUATIONDue to the late spring and continued wet weather, many farmers in the County have not finished sowing their oats. As a rule the crop is in the ground by May first. Corn planting time is at hand and if oat ground must be refitted and sown, prospects point to a serious delay in corn planting.Realizing the seriousness of this situation, the crop extension specialists at State College issued the following statement which may be helpful to Bedford County farmers."Corn is vastly more important than oats in the southern half of Pennsylvania. Oats is seldom a real profitable crop except in the northern and mountainous counties, and late sown oats with normal weather in June and July are frequently not worth harvesting. If the oats are still to be sown, the earliest variety, such as 60 Day or Kherson, should be secured if possible. Barley, which is early and more resistant to heat and drought might well be substituted for oats."In some cases, it will be advisable for farmers to let the oat ground lie and devote their time to getting corn in as soon as possible.
The oat ground may then be planted to soybeans for seed or hay after the corn is planted or may be sown to buckwheat later in the season. These crops may be harvested in time to disk the stubble for winter grain in the fall. Where soil improvement is considered more advantageous than harvesting the crop, it may be plowed down in August."

GET AT THE CAUSE

Many Bedford Folks Are Showing
How to Avoid Needless SufferingThere's nothing more annoying than kidney weakness or inability to properly control the kidney secretions. Night and day alike, the sufferer is tormented and what with the burning and scalding the attendant backache, headache and dizziness, life is indeed a burden. Doan's Pills—
a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys—have brought peace and comfort to many Bedford people. Profit by this Bedford resident's experience:Mrs. Walter Bowers, 155 Spring St., says: "When I bent over, sharp pains shot across my kidneys and up into my shoulders. I had a steady pain in my back most of the time. I had dizzy spells and specks appeared before me. I had weak kidneys which caused me considerable trouble. After using several boxes of Doan's Pills I found great benefit.
I always keep Doan's on hand now."Mrs. Bowers is only one of many Bedford people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for DOAN'S PILLS, the same that Mrs. Bowers had—the remedy backed by home

Men have fought for their lives under various odd conditions and many strange duels have been staged. The history of our West is replete with such incidents. Probably the strangest contest ever recorded in the annals of the West is the duel in this story under the title of "The Duel of the Medicines." A white man with some little skill as a sleight-of-hand performer is taken captive by Redskins and is forced to match his "m a g i c" against that of the cleverest man among the tribes of Sioux, Cheyenne and Ogalala. If he loses he will be tortured to death. The duel goes on for several days and assumes many queer angles. It is the most amazing record ever penned of a white man's matching his craft against an Indian's with life or death as the outcome.

The duel is only one of the many thrilling incidents which abound in this fascinatingly romantic and unusually authentic story, based upon one of the most dramatic chapters in American history—the gold rush, the settling of the Black Hills and the accompanying Indian wars. It is rare to meet in fiction such a colorful pageant of characters and episodes presented with such fidelity to the real facts.

Hugh Pendexter was born in Pittsfield, Me., in the late Seventies, when the Custer Massacre, the Black Hills excitement and other stirring events in and around the Dakota country were the main subjects of discussion in all parts of the country. Much of the literature of his boyhood was devoted to those pages in American history. He was not satisfied with that literature and made up his mind that some day he would give that phase of his country's history the proper romantic treatment. For seventeen years he was one of the most original and entertaining of short story writers. About eight years ago he decided to devote his time to novels with correct historical backgrounds. "Pay Gravel" is his first achievement in that line and fulfills his boyhood ambition to write the real story of the Black Hills.

CHAPTER I

The Trail to Gold-Land

All day the three horsemen had traveled under a cold gray sky to swing farther away from the Raw Hide buttes and cross the Running Water.

Two days before, when leaving Fort Laramie, they had been thrilled by stories of Cheyenne being crowded with wagon trains and wild with excitement over the news from the Black Hills. It had seemed a fine thing to set out alone while others tarried for an escort of troops, or until their numbers could defy Indian attacks. They had deemed it to be a simple maneuver, this slipping through hostile country, while Cheyenne and Sioux were looking for bigger game.

Every hour the grades grew steeper and the country more unlovely. Added to physical discomfort was the knowledge that the worst was ahead. For in 1876—and this was the first day of August in that lively year—although the country south of the North Platte was held by troops and was quite thoroughly mapped, all north of the river was so much uncertainty.

To Peter Dinsdale, leading spirit of the three adventurers, it was new country, as he claimed to be fresh from Arizona. His companions were direct from the East, and their ignorance was complete.

One incident broke the monotony of the afternoon's journey—the meeting with a large freight wagon drawn by six horses. On one side of the wagon was painted:

"San Juan Joe's Outfit. Deadwood City, Deadwood Gulch."

Inside, sheltered from the gusty rain, were five men, each heavily armed. Dinsdale at a glance identified four of these as being gentlemen of the night—gamblers. The other, the driver, was uncouth and true to the type of the time and place. He announced he was driving to Cheyenne to bring back a freight of implements and supplies for the "swellest gamblin' place" in the hills.

What interested the horsemen more, especially the easterners, was the information that two wagons with seven or eight men were ahead on Hat creek, waiting for reinforcements before risking the trip across the strip of Indian country. Eager to add their rifles to the train, the three men impatiently urged their weary animals up the shoulder of a lofty bluff.

Dinsdale was the first to reach a point affording a view of the valley. He soberly informed his companions: "Train's pulled out. We'll be hard put to overhaul it."

The other two men stared moodily down on Hat creek, the dividing line between "safe" and "hostile" country. In an attempt to revive their drooping spirits Dinsdale advised that they push forward to the Cheyenne river. This was strenuously objected to, and he was reminded that Johnny Bowman's ranch was across the creek. The hospitality of the ranch was famous from the Upper Missouri to Cheyenne and Denver.

"Bowman's it is then," agreed Dins-dale, but without enthusiasm. "If we came up here to find a ranch the program is bully. But if we're keen to get into the hills we ought to take advantage of this weather and push on."

It was evening before they reached the stopping place. The horses knew the day's hard grind was over and whinnied their pleasure as a ranch hand appeared out of the dusk to lead them to the corral. The travelers lost no time in entering the popular way-station.

There were only four guests in the house, if three old frontiersmen in tattered buckskin, and grouped before the open fire, could be styled such. To the casual eye they were loungers rather than transients. The fourth man, tall and slender and of dark complexion, was dining sumptuously at the long table on venison, warm bread and coffee.

The easterners, somewhat wild of eye, lingered near the plainsmen, hungry for authentic information. The three old men, appreciating the gullibility of their audience, lost no time in turning their imagination loose in a patched-up recital of horrors.

Dinsdale ignored their garrulous tales and gravitated to the table. He observed and admired the rather immaculate dress of the dark-faced man. "Gambling man and dandy," decided Dinsdale as he made to seat himself at the end of the table.

The man glanced up, smiled pleasantly and motioned for him to be more neighborly by kicking back the chair opposite his. Dinsdale was glad to accept the invitation.

"I'm Pete Dinsdale, from Cheyenne; from Arizona before that," he informed the other as he shifted his place.

"I'm called 'San Juan Joe.' I have a place up in the hills."

"Met your team going out. Saw your name on it."

"I came down this far with it. Found my outfit back yonder's too small to accommodate the rush. Must have another roulette wheel and more fixings. You're going through?"

"Starting early in the morning?"

"Didn't fancy the stage?"

"I like a horse. Better chance to fight or run."

"What say to our riding together? Don't reckon your friends will object to my joining your party?"

"They'll be tickled to death."

Dinsdale ate hungrily for some minutes, then remarked: "You'd planned to go through with the outfit, or just serving as guard this far?"

"I'd hoped to meet a certain man here. Cheyenne sport. Pool business."

"I'm Not Much Disappointed," Smiled Dinsdale.

He hasn't shown up, and I'm going right back and let him hunt me up."

Further study of San Juan Joe convinced Dinsdale that there was Indian blood in him, although there was nothing to suggest this in his personal presentation and speech. After satisfying his hunger Dinsdale lighted his pipe and said:

"I was keen to push through in the darkness to the Cheyenne river. My mates didn't take to the idea. But now that we're four—"

"Go out in this weather? When we have this fire and food and really good whisky?" cried the gambler in mock dismay. "I'll get up before sunrise, but that's my limit."

"I'm not much disappointed," smiled Dinsdale. "I'm afraid my friends have listened too long to step outside this place till daylight."

"If it's in the cards that we get through we'll turn the trick. If the cards are against us no amount of night travel will help." And San Juan shrugged his shoulders and smiled, as if making game of his superstition even while catering to it.

Dinsdale turned and looked at his companions. They were being served by the fire and were pausing between mouthfuls to gaze in horror at the solemn recital of the three old liars.

"—an' cut off his arms while he was alive," soberly concluded one of the narrators.

"An' his ears," eagerly added another. "Don't go forgittin' his ears, Ben."

"They'll be finished by morning," said Dinsdale. "I've heard great yarns about Deadwood Gulch."

"They overplay it," said San Juan, leaning back and carefully lighting an excellent cigar. "The gulch is certainly the poor man's diggings. We've been figuring the days of placer mining, with each man grabbing for himself, were over. Then came the discovery in the hills and opened the game for the poor man once more. The bar and hill diggings are good, and they'll take out two million this season. Next summer will see mills at work, for they're after quartz now. But once vein-mining comes in, then good-by to the placers and the poor man's chance."

"Down at Laramie they're saying the Indians are bothering you quite a bit."

"The red devils have marked nearly four hundred killings on their coup-sticks since the season opened. Yes, the Indians are holding back discoveries all right. Prospectors don't dare go far from any camp."

"Road agents have been pretty busy, too, I take it."

"Busy, but not making much. No big hauls. They did get twenty-five thousand dollars from one treasure coach, but only two men were guarding it. The regular coach carries two hundred thousand each trip, with twelve guards. The agents haven't tried to crack one of those yet."

"Wonder the Indians don't bag some of the agents."

"Maybe they do. Hope so. Every time a passenger is robbed I feel I've lost that much."

And he laughed softly.

Dinsdale succeeded in tearing his friends away from their fascinating company and brought them to the table to meet San Juan Joe. After a little talk Dinsdale and his companions turned in, but Joe, a slave to nocturnal habits, sat up far into the night playing solitaire.

The morning was cold and damp. The easterners were standing before the fireplace when Dinsdale joined them. He urged them to hurry their breakfast and make ready for an early start. The older of the two shamefacedly confessed:

"Pete, we've had enough. From what those men at the fire said last night—and they're old enough to know what they're talking about—we'd be darned lucky to get through alive. But even if we got there and did find gold what chance would we stand of fetching it out? Either the road agents or the Indians would be sure to catch us."

"Those old fools were trying to scare you," warmly remonstrated Dinsdale.

"They scared this boy all right," frankly confessed the younger of the men. "I'm through. I wouldn't go a rod farther for a whole mountain of gold."

"We'd rather you'd think us darned fools, Pete, than to take the risk," added the other. "So we're going to wait for the first outfit bound south and strike for Fort Laramie."

"Those old liars certainly filled you boys up," sighed Dinsdale. "Well, if you really feel that way about it, then the hills aren't any place for you. Go back and stick to raising vegetables and flowers. I'm starting as soon as I eat."

He had finished his breakfast when San Juan Joe turned out. Despite their early rising the two did not get started until nine o'clock because of the threat of rain. Not until the sun struggled through the sullen clouds was the journey commenced. Bowman shouted good wishes after them, and the two easterners waved their hats in farewell.

The traveling was hard on the horses, as the mud had a glue-like tenacity in clinging to the hoofs. After two hours of slow progress they swung in close to a high yellow bluff and came to Indian creek.

They halted and looked about for signs of the two wagons. They found the trail left by the mud-blocked wheels, and could tell where at frequent intervals the men had halted to shovel the mud from between the spokes and from between the wheels and the wagon boxes.

The two men rode several rods apart, the gambler in the lead. Each was armed with a Winchester forty-four; but for immediate use Dinsdale preferred his two hand-guns. Colt forty-fours, as he believed any fight that might be brought to them would be in the nature of a hand-to-hand struggle.

By six o'clock they had covered some eighteen miles, and were glad to take refuge in a deserted cabin at the right on the road and on the bank of the creek. They ate cold venison, and did not attempt coffee. Dinsdale retired early, leaving San Juan seater before a sickly fire, dealing out the cards.

By morning the persistent wind had dried up much of the mud and cheered by the prospect of making good time, the men devoured some rickham and barbecue, brought along by the gambler, and resumed their journey. As they followed the road, riding side by side, Dinsdale remarked of his companion's lack of belt-guns

Popular Poem Is to Blue and Gray

New York Attorney Gained Fame by Tender Tribute to Fallen Heroes.

POETS in many lands have reaped public as well as literary honors, but New York state furnishes the isolated instances of a poem which not only made an upstate lawyer famous, but was the direct means of elevating him to a seat on the bench of the highest tribunal in the state.

The lawyer was Francis M. Finch. The poem was "The Blue and the Gray." The place attained by the author was judge of the Court of Appeals.

With the recurrence of Decoration Day there is a revival of popular interest in the poem which may be said to have foreshadowed it, beginning:

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled;
When the blades of grave grass quiver,
Asleep are the ranks of the dead.

Two years before Decoration day became a holiday, the poem which inspired it, "The Blue and the Gray," was written by Mr. Finch, then forty years old, and living in Ithaca, on the shores of Lake Cayuga. That was in 1867, two years after the close of the Civil war. The author had been international revenue collector, but, tiring of official life, he became interested in Cornell university.

The close of the Civil war found both sections of the United States eager and craving for peace. In many pulpits the favorite text was the words from Micah: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

But there were many empty chairs at family firesides, many missing faces at the family board, and widows and orphans everywhere told the story of four years of strife, the bitter recollections of which could not be appeased by pleasant words or speeches counseling moderation and forgiveness.

Mr. Finch (unconsciously, he afterward said) struck the popular chord and keynote of reconciliation by appeal to the memory of the dead in "The Blue and the Gray," published in the Atlantic Monthly. A national convention had been held in Philadelphia to promote the appeasement of the two sections, and northern and southern men (South Carolina and Massachusetts delegates), walking arm in arm, had typified, or attempted to typify, the general spirit of renewed patriotic comradeship.

A Memorial Day, dedicated to forgetfulness of the wounds of war and to redecorating the graves of the fallen with flowers, at first was observed in the various states at different times, but usage soon settled upon May 30, which has been made a legal holiday in most of the states. This day was chosen because it was the date of the discharge of the last soldier in the Union army in the Civil war, which ended officially not with the cessation of hostilities, but with the mustering out of the last volunteer soldier on May 30, 1866.

The concluding words of "The Blue and the Gray" are, perhaps, the ones best remembered:

Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

Although Mr. Finch became a professor at Cornell after having been a lawyer of some note and an office holder in the federal services, to the public, he was known almost solely as the author of "The Blue and the Gray." When, some years later, there was a vacancy on the Court of Appeals bench he was nominated for it and elected. His term expired in 1896. He died in Ithaca in 1907.—New York Times.

Where 979 Unknown Lie

The little slabs shown here, and on which no names are graven, are mute evidence of the fact that 979 of the 5,663 brave men who gave up their lives in the greatest battle of the Civil war, went to graves unknown. They lie in the shadow of the monument that marks the spot where Lincoln delivered his famous Gettysburg speech at the dedication of the cemetery in 1863.

ACTION IS FAST AND FURIOUS IN PLAY ANNOUNCED FOR CHAUTAUQUA

SCENE FROM "GIVE AND TAKE"

Dramatic critics have been quick to praise this comedy-drama announced for Chautauqua:

"Delightful comedy, a whirlwind of laughter and something close to tears in the very amusing farce comedy which Aaron Hoffman has written. The action is fast and furious, the comedy lines continuous and the dialogue crisp and humorous, while tears lie sometimes just under the laughter."

"There is an untold amount of comedy in 'Give and Take.' A pretty love story runs throughout the piece, while the action is swift and colorful; never lagging."

"A farce comedy with every essential of interest, suspense, cleverness and excellent presentation is found in the new offering of 'Give and Take,' the hilarious book by Aaron Hoffman."

"The audience screamed its approbation of all that took place."

Who Are the Real Community Boosters?

How many people in Bedford realize what a live, progressive community they live in? How many are as proud of their home town and its institutions as they should be?

Everybody knows what fine people live here---what splendid friends and neighbors we have---and we all know something about the solid integrity and high ability of our business men. But how often do our people stop to realize what splendid stores we have right here at home and close home---right in our buying district?

Keen competition has stimulated our local and nearby merchants to constantly seek the best goods at lowest prices in all the markets of the world. That's what makes this town and this district a real place to buy.

It surely pays to buy closest home. A part of every dollar you spend in your vicinity goes permanently into the building of its future prosperity.

If your home merchant cannot supply your needs, Altoona Booster members, with their unlimited facilities, enormous stocks and unequalled means for service are right at your door---ready and willing to supply the wants of those who live in this prosperous Central Pennsylvania district of which we are all a part and proud of the fact.

The home town first---ALWAYS.

Your district center---Altoona---is your nearest big neighbor and you will always find your visits profitable.

HE MAY have been a grocer's clerk,
Who dealt in tea and lard,
He may have been the gawky youth,
Who raked a village yard;
However humble his estate,
He is exalted now,
The unknown soldier o'er whose dust
Memorial Day we bow

He may have fought in Union blue,
With Grant or Sheridan;
He may have charged with Roosevelt up
The hill at San Juan,
He may have died on Flanders Field,
Where scarlet poppies spread
Their silken petals like a tent
Above the gallant dead.

His comrades may have called him
Pat,
Or Dominick or Bill
Before he heard the bugles sound
Their summons loud and shrill;
War reached a bloody finger out
And smeared away his name;
But freedom folds him in the flag
And loves him just the same.

So on this day of memories
When lavishly we strew
Gold-hearted daisies over him,
And lilacs starred with dew!
We think not of the past he played
In battles lost or won,
But that beneath the garland sleeps
Some mother's soldier son

Boy Scouts Decorate Graves of Soldiers

Preceding Memorial Day every year boy scouts in every section of the country journey to the cemeteries and silently pass from one grave to another, placing a small flag at each, to indicate the service rendered and that flowers are to decorate the little mound.

'DECORATION DAY' IS TIME TO REMEMBER

Period That Marks Deeds of Nation's Brave Men.

"DECORATION DAY," as so many of us love to call May 30th, was, first of all, a day set apart as sacred to the memory of our fallen heroes of the Civil war. It was a day on which with ceremonial gatherings and floral offerings we honored the nation's dead. Lessons of patriotism and loyalty were instilled into the minds and hearts of our young people and we were all made conscious of the debt of gratitude which we, as American citizens, owe to those who had given their lives in the service of their country.

And if, at the present time for many of the younger generation, the day has come to be more like a national holiday devoted to games and amusements, it still holds a sacred significance in the hearts of many, not as a holiday, but as a day given over to sweet and tender memories of the ones who have passed away from our mortal sight, but to whose lowly resting place we may carry our flowers, as a fragrant testimonial of our love and affection. Few there are but on "Decoration Day" make this pilgrimage of love to the last resting place of some dear one, and for this reason May 30th is a day that brings all human hearts together in a bond of mutual sympathy and friendliness. We never forget the dear ones we have loved and lost, but it is well that on this day we pay especial tribute to their memory.

But there is another special feature of "Decoration Day" that is not observed as it should be by many people. We still have with us a few of the veterans of the Civil war. Bent and feeble they are, and every year their ranks are growing thinner, and these, too, deserve to be remembered and honored on "Decoration Day." They should not be felt to be forgotten and unremembered, and so, on this "Decoration Day" of 1924.

Let us turn to the war-scarred veterans in the rank and file today. The few that are left of the many who bravely marched away. Let us tender our grateful homage. And garland each honored head. Let us cheer the living heroes. While we pay tribute to the dead.

COMEDY MUSICIAN ENTERTAINS HERE

ROBERT HERRICK

Character impersonations, given before Chautauquans by Robert Herrick, of Herrick and Jensen, are realistic. He not only by gesture, word and expression makes his characterizations seem life-like, but in some of his numbers he makes up to suit the part. In the program entitled "Something Different" this clever entertainer talks, sings and teases the piano. In quick succession he brings before his audience a wide and amusing variety of individuals, from many walks of life.

WELL POSTED ON NATIONAL AFFAIRS

BEN A. ARNESON

A specialist in political science Ben A. Arneson, lecturer on this season's chautauqua program, is well informed concerning governmental affairs. He is head of the Political Science Department at Ohio Wesleyan University and is ex-president of the Ohio Academy of Political Science. According to "Who's Who in America," Mr. Arneson is also a member of the American Political Science Association and similar organizations in the field of economics. His Chautauqua subject is "Purified Politics," and he has the ability to make the theme intensely interesting.

"PAY DIRT" TO BE LECTURE SUBJECT

W. L. HARDING

Former Governor W. L. Harding of Iowa will speak to this season's Chautauquans on "Pay Dirt"—a subject of prime importance to both city and country. Mr. Harding is well informed and peculiarly adapted to speak on questions of current and national interest because of his contact with people and affairs in his years of public life. He was a member of the Iowa House of Representatives, 1907-1913, lieutenant-governor of that state, 1913-1915, and 1917-1921 served as Iowa's chief executive. He is now an attorney in Des Moines.

Harry M. Daugherty is not in his office. He should be examining the record.

Lesson for June 1

THE BABYLONIAN EXILE OF JUDAH

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 36 11-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14 34.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What a Boy King Did.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Destruction of Jerusalem.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Last Days of Jerusalem.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Nation in Ruins.

- The Sins of the Nation (vv. 11-16).
1. Zedekiah, the King (vv. 11-13).
(1) Insubordination to God's prophet (v. 12). In the theocratic government of Israel God's prophet occupied a higher place than the king himself. The prophet was God's messenger. Instead of receiving Jeremiah as God's messenger and conforming his life to God's will, as made known by the prophet he refused to humble himself before God.
(2) Rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar (v. 13). Zedekiah was made king of Judah by the king of Babylon but, in spite of this kindness and the word of the Lord spoken to him by Jeremiah (Jer. 38-17, 18; 52:3), he rebelled against the king of Babylon.
(3) He stiffened his neck and hardened his heart against God (v. 13). Those who rebel against rightly constituted authority, soon are resisting the will and grace of God.
2. The Priests and People (vv. 14-16).
(1) They followed the heathen (v. 14). Even the priests who ministered in the house of God were practicing the sins of the heathen nations surrounding them.
(2) They polluted the house of the Lord (v. 14). The house of the Lord was sacred, having been dedicated to the Lord and consecrated to His service. For priests to officiate while living lives of impurity was pollution to God's house.
(3) They mocked God's messengers (v. 16). Instead of receiving them as from God, they mocked them.
(4) They despised God's word (v. 16). To set at naught God's counsel is to despise His word (Prov. 1:25).
(5) Misused God's prophets (v. 16). They not only mocked them but imprisoned some and slew others. This they persisted in until God could no longer restrain His wrath.
3. The Judgment Falls (vv. 17-21).
1. Slaughter by the Sword (v. 17). So severe did this judgment fall that the King of the Chaldees slew young men even in the house of the sanctuary and "had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man or him that stooped for age."
2. The Treasures and Sacred Vessels Carried to Babylon (v. 18). This included, not only the treasures of the house of the Lord, but of the king and his princes.
3. Burned the House of God (v. 19). This was the sacred temple built by Solomon with certain additions and modifications.
4. Broke Down the Walls of Jerusalem (v. 19). The aim in this was to render the walls useless as a means of defense.
5. Burned the Palaces (v. 19). It would seem that the common houses were left for the poor people who remained in the land.
6. Destroyed All the Goodly Vessels (v. 19). This would mean that the palaces were plundered of all that was valuable.
7. Carried the People into Captivity and Made Slaves of Them (v. 20). Those who had escaped the sword were now carried away and enslaved. It would seem that a number of people had deserted to the Babylonians. From II Kings 25:12 we learn that the poorest of the people were left in the land. Those who would not like to make any trouble were left as vine-dressers and husbandmen. Since the custom was to colonize conquered territory by foreign peoples the object in leaving the poor people was that the country might be ready and over those people Godallah was appointed with headquarters at Mizpeh. When the walls were broken Zedekiah fled by night his object being to hide in the mountains west of Jordan. He was overtaken in the plains of Jericho (II Kings 25:7) by the Chaldean army. He was captured and taken to the king of Babylon who was at Riblah, a town north of Damascus. Zedekiah was tried before Nebuchadnezzar, his eyes were put out, he was bound with fetters of brass, and carried away to Babylon, where he remained a prisoner until the day of his death (Jer. 52:11).

Duty to Your Neighbor

Your "duty" to your neighbor will have to be looked at in the light of a pleasure if it is to do either you or him much good.

Learning From Others

You can learn a hundred things from others where you learn one from your own experience.
